Practice

Viraf Mehta is a social anthropologist who has been working on corporate responsibility issues for nearly three decades, notably with pioneering companies and NGOs, including Tata Group and Partners in Change. He has served on the boards and committees numerous Industry, Government and Civil Society organisations, including the Bureau of Indian Standards, Global Compact Network-India, the South Asia Forum for Responsible Business. He was a member of the Guidelines Drafting Committee of the National Voluntary Guidelines for the Economic, Social and Environmental Responsibilities of Business (NVGs) which were released in 2011 by the Ministry of Corporate Affairs, and was part of a two-person committee that was tasked with updating the Guidelines in 2016.

Since 2007, Mr. Mehta has focussed his attention and support to the Business & Human Rights agenda, and has served on the committees of select international Human Rights organisations and initiatives. Most recently, in April 2016, he was a Rapporteur at the 1st Asia Regional Conference on Business and Human Rights at Doha.

Mr. Mehta has been working as an independent expert consultant since 2010, and lectures writes and trains on Business and Human Rights at Business Schools and Universities in India. He is Convenor, Human Rights & Business Resource Group.
